COLE PENN BEAT HUGE YALE TEAM?

Enthusiasts Say Red and Blue Is Better Even.

CLAIMS SEASON'S HONORS

Quaker Team Undeclared and Has Lost Only Four Points—Cornell Game Will Decide.

Unless Pennsylvania is beaten by Cornell, no unprejudiced man can fail to award the season's football honors of the East to the wearers of Red and Blue.

According to the Penn enthusiasts, every other team, except Dartmouth, has been beaten, and Dartmouth's record is not nearly so good as Penn's. Yale, Harvard, and Princeton have all tasted the bitterness of defeat this year, but of these teams only Yale has made the best record.

Individually Better.

The Pennsylvania team who witnessed the Yale-Harvard game on Saturday say that it was far from a star game, and aver that Penn could have beaten Yale by about the same score that Yale beat Harvard. Each Pennsylvania man criticized the man who played his position, and every one says that he would have little to fear were Penn to be pitted against the Blue.

But Yale will not play Penn, either this or any other year. Unofficially comes over the ruling powers at the New Haven institution. Even so, it is out of the moment it was realized that the game could not longer be looked on as a practice match. This fact in a season like the present, strengthens Penn's claim for the honors, since the Philadelphians are ready to play, while Yale is not. Should Penn shut out Cornell next Thursday this will be the best year the Red and Blue has ever had in football. Past Successes.

The previous most successful years of football at Pennsylvania were 1894, 1895, and 1897, when every game was won, but in each of these years Penn and touchdowns scored against it, while this year the goal has been obtained by Penn's opponents.

In 1894 Penn beat Princeton and Cornell without being scored on, but Harvard got four points and the Crescent A. C. and the University of Virginia secured a total of 20 points for the year. In 1895 Penn won all games, but had 24 points tallied against the team, Harvard making 14, Cornell State College, 4, and Chicago A. C., 4.

In 1896 Penn beat Harvard, but was beaten early in the season by Lafayette, and 20 points were made against the eleven.

Last Good Year.

The last year of successes before this was 1897, when all the games were won, but 20 points were made by opponents, Washington and Jefferson getting 4, the Indians 10, and Harvard, 6. This is the first year that Penn has ever shut out Harvard. No Penn eleven ever showed so distinct a superiority over the Crimson as did this year's at Cambridge. The records of Penn's three previous winning years follow:

FATAL ACCIDENT
ON THE GRIDIRON
Lehigh Senior Killed While Playing on Team of His Home Town.
Tackled Too Hard.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 21.

Samuel Hess, a senior in Lehigh University, died of a heart attack while playing football for the Lehigh team at Hellertown, this county, and son of former Senator J. S. Hess, received injuries in a game between the Hellertown team and the Packer A. C. eleven of South Bethlehem on Saturday, from the effects of which he died at midnight.

The game was played at Hellertown, and at an exciting period in the middle of the second half Hess got possession of the ball and started around the end. He had nearly reached the opposing goal, when he was tackled hard by Dick, fullback of the Packer eleven, and thrown over his head. He was unconscious when picked up, and never regained consciousness. Death was due to a concussion of the brain and internal injuries.

Thomas Tobin, fullback on the Emmet football team, of South Bethlehem, was seriously hurt in a practice game yesterday.

Greatly Improved Service to Chicago and the Northwest via Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. Effective November 27, "Chicago Express" will leave Washington 8:30 p. m., two hours earlier than at present, arriving Chicago 5:30 p. m. next day, making direct connections with intersecting lines for Michigan points, and all evening trains from Chicago to the West and Northwest.

Personal Comment on Men and Things in the Field of Sports

And still Penn's goal is uncrossed.

Fred Tatal, one of the leading jockeys of this country a decade ago, has returned from Europe after a successful season on the Austrian tracks. He intends to take Johnny, his fifteen-year-old son, to New Orleans, where he expects to develop the youngster into a first class rider.

Jack O'Brien has been plugging away at law for three years, and he is about to launch forth as a full fledged barrister.

The annual cross country run of the intercollegiate league will be held at Travers Island on next Wednesday.

Frank Getch, the American champion, and Charles Rodgers, of Boston, will wrestle for the championship at Buffalo on Monday night.

The four-year rule will bar Georgetown of two of her very best players next year. Percy Giffin, the center, and Hub Hart, will never again play after the close of the season.

Joe Bernstein, the Ghetto champion, got his other night at New York theater when Johnnie Shields, the erstwhile featherweight, caught him with a left hook on the jaw and sent him sprawling into the orchestra pit.

In a twenty-four-hour billiard match the pedometer worn by one of the players showed that he walked over twenty-two miles during the contest.

Fred Titus, the former bicycle racer, was taken to automobile and will enter the speeding game around New York.

Joe Gans and Billy Melody are scheduled to meet in Philadelphia on December 9.

Lohe Ferris, the speedy second baseman, has been promoted to first base by President Taylor, of the Boston Americans.

Jockey Phillips will be kept from riding any more this season by a compound fracture of the leg received at the Fair Grounds, New Orleans.

Jack Gass, the Lehigh man, makes a good referee.

Here's to Georgetown, champion of the District of Columbia and vicinity.

Woods certainly put up a good game at center, considering the handicaps under which he was laboring. He was the best lineman on his team and made an uphill fight against an opponent, who outweighed him more than thirty-five pounds.

"It's said the Washingtonians' cheer is very cutting.

Given made his first touchdown in his four years on the Blue and Gray eleven.

Fumblitis was Georgetown's worst disease.

The Georgetown ends had their eyes peeled for trick plays, but after the first exorable failure the Washington eleven tried straight football the few times it had the ball.

Frank West, the Washington fullback, took a lot of punishment in backing up the line. He stood up bravely, but the game, which he announced was particularly clean.

After the game Captain Bielaski said that his whole team appreciated Georgetown's spirit of sportsmanship in the game, which he announced was particularly clean.

The feeling between Orme and Kilgore was none too good, and early in the game Empire Kelly saw the Washington guard get a little too strenuous and immediately disfigured the pugilistically inclined youth.

Billy West played a pretty game at right end, and Washington could not make a better choice than elect him captain for next season.

Carroll's punt in the second half from near the line of scrimmage went fully sixty yards. Washington suffered from the absence of a good punter, Winston, two attempts netting only fifty yards.

In the first half, after a pretty run, McGuffin completely hurled Steenson, but did not land squarely and fell. That's the time the Blue and Gray quarter grabbed the back of Mac's jersey.

Georgetown's showing on the gridiron this fall has been most creditable, and Head Coach Kelly and Assistant Coach Grant Owens are to be congratulated upon the fine record of the Blue and Gray team.

Coach Rorke had many obstacles to overcome at Georgetown university, but only two defeats out of eight games, is not so bad after all.

The work of the George Washington cheering section in the east stand won many friends for the Blue and Gray. Not once in the whole season did their supporters waver in their loyalty, continued to cheer as though victorious, even after the score had passed the half century mark. It was certainly a grand spirit and won admiration even from the staunchest Georgetown man. After the game the Blue and Blue students fell in behind the buses and marched two miles to the medical school, where the team dressed. Five hundred strong they massed about the building and cheered each member of the team individually, the coaches and the scrubs. Such a spirit is bound to reap reward.

High-Class Entries For Benning Stakes

Washington Cup, Benning Special, Maximum Stakes, and Junior Steeplechase Attract Fine Horses.

The Washington Cup, the Benning Special, and the Maximum Stakes, the three big events of the Benning meeting for horses of mature age, closed Saturday with a splendid entry list.

The Cup, which will be one of the attractions for Thanksgiving Day, has fourteen entries, and the class is, as a whole, far above that of the past. The Columbia Stable has entered Graziallo, who, it is said, has received a special preparation for the race, and who will try to keep the honor that belongs to the winner in Washington.

The Goughage Stable has entered Shortnose, who won the Morris Park weight-for-age race, at Westchester a few weeks ago, and by so doing earned the Woodlawn Vase, one of the most famed racing trophies of the country. Shortnose will be compelled to take up a crushing burden, 134 pounds, if he runs for the Cup, but George Odom already has been engaged to ride him, and it looks as though his party expected him to go in spite of the weight. Ed Hanna, trainer of Graziallo, was anxious to secure the services of Odom for the race, but Fred Freestone, the manager of the Goughage Stable, saw him first.

There are other entries that may prove a thorn in the path of either Shortnose or Graziallo, notwithstanding their class. Old Carbine, who won the event last year, and who has been winning races at Benning for many seasons, will be a starter. So will be Crockett, who, although he only won his maiden race on Friday, is believed to be a great long-distance horse. Like his sire, Ben Holladay, who could run all day, Go Between, Persistence II, The Southerner, and Vestment are some of the other prominent entries.

The Benning Special will probably bring Bartender out here for the first time, unless his trainer prefers to give him a preparatory race in an overnight event. This wretchedly named son of The Bard has shown high class in his recent races. Opposed to him in the special are such horses as Balkan, The Southerner, Andrew Mack, Ben Crockett, Dekker, Go Between and others of fair class.

Shortnose again shows up as an eligible for the Maximum, a three-mile race run on the closing day of the meeting, the entries for which include the best of those named for the Cup and Special. With a continuance of the splendid weather that now prevails the Washington folk should see some of the best sport in the history of the Benning track in the next two weeks.

George Wheelock, the executive head of the Metropolitan Turf Association, of which the leading layers of odds East and West are members, has pulled up stakes and left his home, and goes now to make preparations for his annual winter trip to Europe. He expects to leave New York December 18 for Genoa, and he will be accompanied by his wife and child, and they will take an automobile trip through Egypt, Algeria, and Italy, returning to this country in time for the Benning spring meeting of next season.

Wheelock, it is said, has been very successful this season. He has at all times had a book on, but for a greater part of the time, the booking operations have been in charge of his brother. This arrangement left him free to conduct his betting transactions, and he has been one of the biggest players from the ground of this season. A conservative estimate of his profits this season would set the mark a little short of half a million dollars.

Highly Marn, the steeplechase rider who had a most unfortunate season, being laid up for a greater part of the time, now is managing a feed store at Sheephead Bay. Marn had a good thing up his sleeve for the Benning meeting and showed up at the course Saturday. He is the same cheerful Irishman of his riding days.

I came over to sell the President a couple of hats, he said with a very business-like air when asked the reason for his presence here.

I came over to sell the President a couple of hats, he said with a very business-like air when asked the reason for his presence here.

David Gideon, one of the biggest betters in the East, was always a factor in the ring operations at Benning, and was now recording for himself when he beat six races on Friday.

"I have heard people tell of beating the entire card," said Mr. Gideon, "but I have never done it before. And at times I did not wish to speak of, for I was only picking and my entire winnings amounted to only $1,000. I should have won $12,000."

That was on Friday. On Saturday Mr. Gideon tried to pick the winners with such unerring accuracy. He believed Oxford a cinch for the Grand Conception and lost more on his decision than he won on his other bets before. And such are the fortunes of war on the race track.

Thanksgiving Day Game Has Been Canceled.

BLUE AND GRAY INDIGNANT

Manager Carlin Hopes to Get V. P. I. to Fill Open Date—Lehigh-Lafayette Contest.

The Lehigh management has called off the game scheduled to be played at Georgetown on next Thursday, and has left Washington without a football game for Thanksgiving Day.

Ever since the death of President Brown last Wednesday the manager of the Bethlehem team has been most anxious to cancel the game with the Blue and Gray, so that the Lehigh-Lafayette game, which was scheduled for Saturday, might be switched to Thanksgiving Day, and this has been done.

Georgetown Indignant.

The Georgetown men are quite indignant at the peculiar action of the Lehigh people in throwing the local university down in favor of another rival at such a late date, and it is almost impossible for Manager Carlin to arrange a game with some other team.

Manager Carlin has been busy since he received the final cancellation notice from Lehigh in endeavoring to get some other team to come in and take the place of the Pennsylvanians, but as yet he has been unable to make arrangements with any team, as they all have games already scheduled for Thanksgiving Day, or have broken training.

If possible the Virginia Polytechnic Institute will be brought on, if Georgetown can get V. P. I. for the open date the game should prove a great drawing card, as the Virginians have one of the strongest teams in the South.

WASHINGTON DOGS SECOND AND THIRD

Dr. Judd Took Field Trial Honors.

WON IN ALL-AGE STAKES

Mallwyd Prince J. and Mallwyd Mark Make Splendid Showing Against Mack Ewing.

The field trials of the Maryland and District of Columbia Field Trials Association were held at Easton, Md., on Thursday and Friday last.

Brace G., a beautiful pointer, the property of Graceon Gent, of Cockeysville, Md., won the Derby stake, and Mack Ewing, a stylish setter, took the first money in the all-age stake. Two Washington dogs, Mallwyd Prince J. and Mallwyd Mark, owned by Dr. Sylvester D. Judd, of Washington, captured second and third prizes in the all-age event.

Brace G. won Derby.

The winner of the Derby stake, Brace G., is a young dog, but those who witnessed his trials in the field say that he gives promise of becoming one of the greatest field trial dogs in the country.

Duke, a pretty unon and white setter, who is always aisy, owned by George Dobbin, of Baltimore, was given second prize in the Derby, and Billy Woodcliffe, a handsome pointer, the property of William Armstrong, of Baltimore, was awarded the third prize. The fourth prize went to Black Baby, a setter, owned by Mr. Derrickson, of Berlin, Md.

The most interesting event to the District dog owners was the All-Age Stake, which was run on Friday morning, over a hilly stubble. The lucky dog in the morning trials was Dr. Judd's Mallwyd Prince J. Prince located a bevy in a short time and held it staunchly, while Edward Hardcastle, the club's host, came up from behind and killed a bird on the rise. Prince being steady to wing and shot. In the next series, which was run late in the afternoon, Prince was pitted against the well-known winner of last year, Mack Ewing, one of the best-known setter dogs in the country.

Mack set a wonderful stride, and was located the coveted bevy, which he held staunch as a rock, while Prince backed fifty feet away. The prize winner held his birds until Dr. James L. McGinnis, of Trappe, Md., killed a bird from the cover. Both dogs behaved in the splendid manner that distinguishes the pure shooting class from the high-class article.

Prince Was Thorough.

While Mack has more style and speed than the Prince, he seemed to have a few more straight lines, although he located his quarry quickly. Prince is slower, but is more thorough, covering the field in a manner that left nothing unaccounted for. Mallwyd Prince J. was the third prize in the All-Age Stake is a son of Mallwyd Prince, and gives promise of being a remarkable field dog. Dr. Judd owns some of the finest setters in the country, his dogs having captured blue ribbons at the best bench shows in New York, and other great centers, but he is, unfortunately, not in sympathy with field trials, and his dogs demonstrate their worth in the field.

Show Dogs Hunters.

In commenting on the results of the trials last week, Dr. Judd declared that the work of his dogs proved conclusively that sportsmen cannot afford to laugh at the bench show setters because the dogs have had little opportunity to demonstrate their worth in the field.

Dr. Judd's dogs are of the finest breed, and he is a member of the Maryland and District of Columbia Field Trials Association, the members assigned credit to the winner of the trials last week. Mr. Dodge was in charge of the trials last year also and managed them successfully.
